

Singaporean Company

AI Overview

Singapore hosts a diverse range of companies, from global tech giants and financial institutions to homegrown startups and multinational agribusinesses. Major Companies by Revenue and Market Capitalization Singapore is home to several high-revenue and high-market-cap companies. Notable examples include Wilmar International, a leading agribusiness with over 400 subsidiaries, and Olam Group, a global food and agribusiness company headquartered in Singapore despite its Nigerian origins. Other top firms include Trafigura Group, which operates primarily from Singapore, and major financial institutions and real estate companies that dominate the local economy. Technology and Digital Economy Singapore has established itself as a regional tech hub, attracting both foreign giants and fostering local startups. Key players include: Sea Group, a homegrown tech company offering e-commerce (Shopee), fintech (SeaMoney), and gaming products. Grab, a super-app providing ride-hailing, e-commerce, and digital payment solutions. Salesforce, which has its APAC headquarters in Singapore, leveraging the city-state's skilled workforce. Wise, a fintech company innovating international money transfers and business payments. Other Notable Companies Singapore also hosts multinational corporations with regional operations, such as Mondelez International, which develops global food and beverage brands, and McDonald's, which maintains a significant tech division in Singapore. These companies highlight Singapore's role as a hub for both operational headquarters and technology-driven innovation.
